Komori Corporation Announces Receipt of Overseas Order for Currency Printing Equipment

Komori Corporation (“Komori” or “the Company”) announced the receipt of an order from UK-based DE LA RUE INTERNATIONAL LIMITED for a currency printing equipment. Details are as follows.

1. Overview

Komori Corporation Japan is pleased to announce that De La Rue International Limited, one of the largest security printers in the world and following the recent contract award to print the Bank of England notes, has ordered two full lines of banknote printing equipment to be installed in the Bank of England’s Debden printing facility. This order follows the great success of the previous installation at De La Rue’s Gateshead facility, where Komori supplied a full line of banknote printing equipment.

Komori will harness this opportunity to establish a brand of ‘quality and trust’ and build on its position as the competitive security press supplier in the worldwide security printing industry. The order comes again on the back of a technical agreement between the two companies which will see Komori work closely with De La Rue for fundamental improvements in quality, productivity and cost reduction and for the development of future innovative security printing technology.

Komori Corporation are delighted to be associated with such a well-respected company in this industry and are very much looking forward to developing the excellent partnership in the coming years.

2. Impact on Business Performance

The Company’s financial results for the current fiscal year ending March 31, 2015 are unaffected as the revenue from this order will be recorded in the subsequent fiscal year.
