<Reasons for revisions>

Although the electronics industries are making a steady performance led by automobile, industrial equipment and smart phones markets, sales of the second half of the fiscal year ending March 31, 2017 is expected to be lower than the initial forecast due to the appreciation of the yen more than expected. On the other hand, operating income is expected to exceed the initial forecast due to the effect of reduction in capital expenditure and costs. Also, in consideration of occurrence of foreign exchange losses according to the appreciation of the yen more than expected and decrease of income taxes due to the impact from tax effect accounting, the company has revised its forecast data of consolidated business results for the fiscal year ending March 31, 2017, announced on May 10, 2016 as above.

Note on forecast data: Since the statement regarding the business results forecast accounted for in this press release is based on current information acquired by ROHM as well as specific legitimate prerequisites, actual business results may be considerably different due to various factors.
