Note Concerning Weekend Reporting by a Newspaper

Japan Display Inc. (JDI) announced that a news report regarding a production cutback of a particular product at its front-end production lines was not based on any announcement made by JDI. Although the company does not release any information about specific products, at present the capacity utilization rates for smartphone panel production lines have been maintained at the level of the previous month and there are no plans to reduce production within the year. Production is scheduled to stop as usual for the year-end and New Year holidays. Regarding production after the holidays, we will continue to carefully monitor demand trends and respond accordingly.
